PREFACE.

THE List of Obituary Monuments and Epitaphia of historical or archæological interest in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, contained in this volume, has been prepared in the form prescribed by the Government of India, Home Department (Ecclesiastical), Resolution No. $\frac{1 \text{ Eccl.}}{57}$, dated Calcutta, the 28th February 1893. The information here furnished regarding these Christian monuments is based partly on personal knowledge and partly on the official returns prepared by the Divisional and District Officers in compliance with the instructions issued by the Local Government in the Public Works Department Resolution No. C. $\frac{4244}{1478}$ W.A., dated Naini Tal, the 11th October 1893. No pains have been spared by the compiler to make this list of Epitaphs and Monumental Inscriptions as comprehensive and in as full detail as possible, in order to secure new information respecting the early European settlers, factors, writers and others who spent their lives in this country and helped in laying the foundations of the British Indian Empire. No tomb or memorial tablet has been excluded on account of its recent date, if otherwise of interest; for many important events of the British rule in this country, on which these "Chronicles of the Tomb" shed new light, such as, for instance, the great Indian Mutiny, &c., are of comparatively recent occurrence.

With a view to preserve from unmerited oblivion the hitherto forgotten biographies of India, short obituary sketches and memoirs have been given of the most distinguished men in the Annals of Indian History,—men who, at the sacrifice of their lives, have gradually raised the British Indian Empire to its present state of stability and eminence by consolidating its Government, ameliorating the conditions of its subjects, and embracing their spiritual and temporal happiness through the education of its people and the protection of their rights and liberties from the encroachments of invading and cruel enemies. These great men have passed away from the stage on which they have shone so conspicuously; and it is the object of this obituary to perpetuate, cherish and embalm their memory, which becomes doubly dear from the consideration that they have fought, bled and devoted their entire lives and energies to promoting the glory of their country and the good of the people over whom Providence has willed that they should rule.

The list comprehends events connected with a long series of years, viz., from about A.D. 1627, the first formation of the British and Dutch settlements at Agra (see entry No. 545ff.), down to A.D. 1857-58, the dark period of the great Indian rebellion, and it includes a great number of memorial tablets, monumental inscriptions and short obituary sketches. Who will deny that the sight of a mere monument has not repeatedly inspired martial enthusiasm, the flame of patriotism or the emulation of genius in the youthful breast? Siste viator, heroem calcas has awakened ardour in the minds of all who have perused the memorial tablet. How much more, then, is not a memoir of the great actions of illustrious men, in every department of usefulness, calculated to arouse attention and induce the like endeavour? To every class and grade of society, the manifestation that there is no station of life wherein the good and honest men may not have their names and deeds imperishably recorded, will become at once apparent.

Abercrombie in 1794; in 1799 he was present at the battle of Mallivelli; under General Harries at the storming and capture of Seringapatam, and at the taking of several Forts. In 1809 he commanded his regiment, attached to the force under Major-General St. Leger, on the banks of the Sutlej; in 1813 he commanded the field force in Rewah and captured by storm the fort of Entauri, for which he received the thanks of Government. In 1815 he was made a Companion of the Bath and obtained the command of the Kumaun Province; in 1816 he was selected to command the Nagpur Subsidiary Force; in 1817 he commanded the 5th Division of the Army of the Dekkan. In 1818 he totally defeated the army of the Peshwa at Soni, and afterwards took by storm the strongly fortified city of Chanda. In 1826 Brigadier-General Adams, C.B., commanded the reserve at the siege of Bhartpur, which concluded his active services in the field. He was appointed to the command of the Sirhind Division on the 3rd May 1828, promoted to the rank of Major-General by Brevet in 1830, and subsequently made a Knight Commander of the Bath, and resigned the command, having completed his tour on the staff, on the 17th April 1835. Major-General Sir John Adams was greatly beloved by all who were under his command or associated with him during his long and glorious military career in India. His consideration for others and the real active benevolence of his heart: such were the qualities which made him beloved by all. It is well known that the Natives were sincerely and devotedly attached to him, and that they fondly styled him Baba Adams. He never turned a deaf ear to a complaint or tale of sorrow, and was not only liberal in actual donations, but on every occasion soothed the sorrows he could not altogether alleviate, by a tender sympathy, and showed that he felt another's woes.

Major-General Sir John W. Adams died on the 9th March 1837, and his remains were interred in the Subathu Cemetery. The following epitaph marks the grave:—“Sacred to the memory of Major-General Sir John Withington Adams, G.C.B., who, after a distinguished career of 57 years in India in the service of the Honourable East India Company, departed this life on the 9th March 1837, in the 74th year of his age.

“This tomb is erected over his remains in commemoration of his private virtues.

Stuart Beatson died in the prime of life ; and there seems little doubt, had he lived, his clear head and high spirit would have carried him to great distinction.

*NOTE.—Kakrálá in the Badaon district.

NOTE.—This monument is a large column, 50 feet high, with square base of pakka masonry, and pakka plastered. The first three words are inscribed on a scroll and the remainder on a funeral urn; both are in bas-relief on the same slab.

NOTE.—A large cenotaph of pakka masonry with a marble inscription tablet.

NOTE.—A large cenotaph of ornamental brick work.
A memorial column at Calcutta commemorates the high respect in which Sir David Ochterlony was held, and even to this day the reputation he won for generosity and goodness during fifty years of Indian work remains fresh in the minds of many as his best monument.

While darkness veiled the vaulted sky,
In solemn silent march they trod,
Eager to shout their battle cry,
And prompt to war for Britain and for God.
And when the earthquake signal shock,
Gave angry summons to advance,
And firm and stern as planted rock,
Each hero braved the hostile lance :
Remember, soldiers, nothing could uphold
The warrior spirit like the hope of Heaven ;
And would'st thou bear thyself with front as bold,
Believe in Him in whom thy sins forgiven,
He shall support them more awful seems,
When louder trumpets' clang shall rouse their ear,
When Nature's universal wreck is seen,
And saints victorious shout, and sinners sink with fear.

Tomb of Her Highness Zeb-un-nissa, styled "the distinguished of Nobles and beloved daughter of the State" who quitted a transitory court for an eternal world revered and lamented by thousands of her devoted subjects at the Delhi ...

NOTE.—The victory at Sobroan broke and scattered the Sikh army and resulted in the establishment of a British Protectorate at Lahore and the incorporation in the British dominions of all the country, hill and plain, situated between the Beas and the Sutlej.

NOTE.—This famous lady was one of the most remarkable personages of her time: a woman of exceptional beauty and talent, and asserted by some historians to have been the daughter of a decayed Mughal nobleman. In 1767, she married Walter Reinhardt, alias Sommers, or "Sombre" (see entry No. 75).

hammadan Faith. After his death, she succeeded on the 4th May 1778, she succeeded to the district of Sirdhana which had been bestowed upon Sombre in 1773, by the Emperor Shah Alam as a zaidad or military assignment of territory to pay for the up-keep of his army. There she ruled in great state, maintained an army, and commanded it in the field. Three years after Sombre's death she became a convert to the Roman Catholic Faith, and was baptised at Agra on the 17th May 1781 under the name of Joanna Nobilis. She grew immensely rich, was very hospitable, and devoted large sums to charitable and religious institutions. Besides the magnificent cathedral, there still remains many a visible token of her glory at Sirdhana and Meerut.

NOTE.—Nawab Muzaffar-ud daulah Louis Balhazar Reynaud, alias Nawab Zafar Yab Khan Bahadur, was the son of Sombre by his first wife, a Muhammadan woman, who became insane and survived the Begum Zeb-un-nissa by two years, dying in 1838. She is buried in the cemetery at Sirdhana, which contains the graves of several centenarians. He was baptised at Agra on the same occasion with Saunru Begum, and died at Delhi in 1803, his remains being transferred to Agra and buried by the side of his father in the old Roman Catholic cemetery. The offspring of his union with Bahu Begam consisted of a son and daughter, named Aloysius and Julia Anne. The boy died before his father on the 30th October 1802, and was buried in the old Roman Catholic Church at Agra, as appears from an epitaph still remaining. The girl Julia Anne, born on the 19th November 1783, was married in 1806 to Colonel George Alexander David Dyce (see entries Nos. 32 and 33).

NOTE.—There was a numerous issue of this marriage. On the death of Mrs. Dyce (see entry No. 39), there were surviving only one son and two daughters. The daughters, Georgiana and Anne Maria, were given in marriage on the 3rd October 1881, the former to an Italian gentleman named Solaroli, and the latter to Captain Troup. The son, whose name was David Ochterloay Dyce Sombre, born on the 18th December 1808, was adopted by the Saunru Begum, being her step-great grandson, and to him she left the bulk of her fortune (see entry No. 33).

Sirdhana on the 27th of January 1836, aged nearl ninety years. Her remains are deposited underneath in this Cathedral built by herself.

(3) Near the Fort gate at Tappal in the Khair tahsil of the Aligarh district are five tombs, but only two have inscriptions on them. Tomb No. I.—This tomb is in fair order, a few slight repairs are required in replacing some bricks that have come out and plastering. The inscription on the head-stone is quite legible; but it is not sufficiently protected from the weather, and some of the letters are wearing away. The tomb is that of Captain Thomas Smith who commanded the Begam Samru's troops at Tappal at the beginning of the century. The inscription مرقد طامس استه صاحب که بتاریخ بست و درودی الحجه سنه ۱۲۱۱ هجری نبری مطابق سنه ۱۸۱۶ ع تعبیر بست و پنج دوات حیات سر Tomb No. II.—This tomb is situated to the south of Captain Thomas Smith's. There is no inscription on it, though there are remains of what might have been a head-stone at A, the west of the grave.

The grave is reported to be that of the wife of the Officer Commanding the Begam's Troops at Tappal, who committed suicide about 60 years ago. Part of the masonry has been broken at the places marked A and B on the plan; but otherwise the tomb is in good order.

Tomb No. III.—This tomb is in very bad repair, and will fall down in a few years if not looked after, as all the bricks from the foundation have gone, and the superstructure is holding itself together as best it can.

52	Cantonment Cemetery, Muttra.	North of Sadr Bazar.	Muttra...	Tomb of Major-General H. Frazer, died 1804.	Sacred to the memory of Major-General Henry Frazer of His Majesty's 11th Regiment of Foot, who commanded the British Army at the battle of Deig, on the 13th November 1804, and by his judgment and valour achieved an important and glorious victory. He died in consequence of a wound he received when leading on the troops, and was interred here on the 25th of November 1804, in the 40th year of his age. The Army lament his loss with the deepest sorrow; his country regards his heroic conduct with grateful admiration. History will record his fame and perpetuate the glory of his illustrious deed.		NOTE.—The epitaph in column 6 is sufficient evidence that General Frazer's tomb may be considered historical. The Commander-in Chief in addressing the Governor-General on the occasion of this battle, describes it as appearing to have been as severe, attended with as complete success, and achieved by gallantry and courage as ardent, has had marked the conduct of any army, entitling all engaged to the thanks and admiration of their country."

In memory of Robert Sutherland, Colonel in Maharaja Daulat Rao Sindhia's Service, who departed this life on the 20th July 1804, aged 36 years. Also in remembrance of his son, C. P. Sutherland (a very promising youth, who died at Hindia, on the 14th of October 1801, aged 3 years.		NOTE.—Colonel Robert Sutherland of Maharaja Sindhia's Service was according to Mr. Keene (Handbook to Agra), the Governor of the Agra Fort at the time of its capitulation to Lord Lake on the 18th October 1803. It is clear from the narrative of Major Thorn, one of the officers of the investing force, that this is a mistake and that the actual Governor was George Hessian. Colonel Sutherland was, however, on account of his British origin, released from the confinement in which all their European officers had been placed by the mutinous garrison and was sent to treat with Lord Lake for a capitulation. He died at Muttra in July of the following year. One son is buried with him. Another (J. W.) was in 1871, a Justice of the Peace for the country of Surrey. Colonel Sutherland's tomb, an obelisk of greyish red sandstone, some 30 feet high, is in good repair. It may be considered a local monument of the British conquest of this district and should be maintained in good order.

NOTE.—Lieutenant P. H. C. Burlton commanded the Treasury Guard of the Bengal Native Infantry at Muttra, in 1857. Being considered unsafe at Muttra the treasure was loaded in tumbrils in front of the Collector's Office, with a view to its immediate removal to Agra. When Mr. Burlton gave the order to march the guard mutinied and shot him. He was several days later buried on the spot where he fell and a neat tomb which is in good repair was afterwards erected over his grave. Mr. Burlton was the only European murdered in this district during 1857. His tomb has an historical interest in connection with the great mutiny and should be preserved.

Sacred to the memory of Lieutenant P. H. C. Burlton, 67th Native Infantry, who was shot by a detachment of his regiment and of the 41st Native Infantry near this spot on the 30th May 1857. This tomb is erected by his brother officers.

Seringapatam, Revah, Pindari War, Nagpur, Seonie, Entouri, Chandah. In honour of Major-General Sir John Adams, G. C. B., his European and Native friends and admirers of the Bengal Army erect this column. During a distinguished service of 56 years, his eminent military capacity and judgment, his just and general feelings and his demeanour, ever courteous and kind, secured him the respect, love, and veneration of all classes, and more especially of the Bengal Sepoys.

In grateful commemoration of services rendered to posterity by the Hon'ble Sir John Strachey, G. C. S. I., to whom, not forgetting the enlightened sympathy and timely care of others, India is mainly indebted for the rescued and preserved beauty of the Taj Mahal and other famous monuments of the ancient art and history of these Provinces formerly administered by him. This tablet is placed by order of his friend the Earl of Lytton, Viceroy and Governor-General of India, A. D. 1880.

74	Roman Catholic Cemetery, Agra.	Adjoining boundary of Civil Courts on the west.	Ditto ...	Domed tomb of Colonel J. W. Hessing, died 1803.	John William Hessing, late a Colonel in the service of Maharaja Daulat Rao Sindhia, who, after sustaining a lingering and very painful illness for many years with a tone of Christian fortitude and resignation, departed this life, 21st July 1803, aged 63 years, 11 months, and 5 days. As tribute of their affection and regard this monument is erected to his beloved memory by his disconsolate widow, Anne Hessing, and afflicted sons and daughters, George William Hessing, Thomas William Hessing and Magdalene Sutherland. He was a native of Utrecht in Holland.		NOTE.—This cemetery is the earliest Christian cemetery in Northern India and dates from the time of the Emperor Akbar Shah; in it lie buried the remains of the early Catholic missionaries as well as of some famous men known to Indian history, viz., Colonel John Hessing, Walter Reinhardt "Le Sombre," or General Saunru, the descendants of Prince John Philip Bourbon of Novarra, who married Akbar's sister-in-law, Lady Juliana, and others. Unfortunately, most of the inscriptions on the tombstones are either completely destroyed by exposure to the weather or partly illegible; those still readable are either in Portuguese, or Armenian, or French, or Italian. The following epitaphs are of interest:— Episcopus Zachar from Tabrez, died A. D. 1615 Padre Laufferanki S. J. " " 1634 " Antonio Machado S. J. " " 1635

" Antonio Cesques " " 1656
" Paulo de Matios " " 1664
" Marco Antonio Santoso " " 1684
" Francisco de Cruz " " 1742
" Abel Sperger " " 1761
Of the Armenian inscriptions three are of the early part of the XVII century, eighteen of the XVIII, and about forty of the beginning of the present century.

NOTE.—This mausoleum, still in good repairs, is a handsome, octagonal building surmounted by a low dome. The epitaph, very roughly carved in bold letters, is in Portuguese; there is also a Persian chronogram in very flowery style to the same effect.
Walter Reinhardt, a native of Strassburg or of Trèves, took service as a sailor with the French, and as a soldier with the British. Finally he drifted to India, where he attached himself to Mir Kasim, the Nawab of Bengal, and was responsible for the murder of the British residents at Patna in the year 1763. He obtained large grants of land, and married Zeb-un-nissa Begam. He was nicknamed "Le Sombre" on account of his swarthy complexion and sombre cast of his countenance, which the Natives corrupted into Samru, and when he died in 1778 as the Civil and Military Governor of Agra, his widow became famous as the Begam Samru (see entry No. 30.)

and came out to Ceylon in the Military service of the Dutch E. I. Company in the year 1757, and was present at the taking of Candia by their troops. Five years afterwards he returned to Holland and came out again to India in the year 1763, and served under the Nizam of the Decan. In the year 1784, he entered into the service of Madho Rao Sindhia and was engaged in the several battles that led to the aggrandizement of that Chief and wherein he signalized himself so by his bravery as to gain the esteem and approbation of his employer, more particularly at the battle of Bhondgaon near Agra in the year 1787, which took place between this Chief and Nawab Ismael Beg, when he then became a Captain, and was severely wounded. On the death of Madho Rao Sindhia in 1793, he continued under his successor, Daulat Rao Sindhia, and in 1798 he attained to the rank of Colonel, and immediately after to the command of the Fort and City of Agra, which he held to his death.

NOTE.—The handsome marble mausoleum contains only this meagre and laconic inscription: those on the other tombs having become effaced if they ever existed.

Colonel William Linnaeus Gardner, born in 1770, of a noble Irish family, ran away from home and entered the Maratha service, in which he highly distinguished and enriched himself. In the war with Nepal in 1815, when the incompetence of our Generals was bringing disgrace on the British name, Colonel Gardner was offered command of the force destined to occupy Kumaun. In this expedition he was completely successful, reducing Almora; and in conjunction with his brother, the Hon'ble E. Gardner—resident at Khatmandu putting an end to the war. He married a daughter of the royal family of Kachh and establishing himself at Chhaoni in the Etah district, lived in princely splendour. By gift, purchase or as farmer, Colonel Gardner held a large portion of Etah, and on his death, on the 29th July 1835, was succeeded by his second son, W. James Gardner, who ran away with a daughter of the King of Delhi to whom he was subsequently married. Mr. W. Gardner died at Chhaoni on the 14th June 1845, and was buried in the marble mausoleum there beside his father. He left issue, Sulaiman Shikoh, commonly known as Munna Sahib, James alias Hingra Sahib; William Lennis; Sikandar Shikoh; and Jahangir Samuel; but his own extravagance, and the dissensions that arose among his children regarding the distribution of his property, combined with the utmost prodigality in his establishment has alienated the noble possessions once belonging to the family. For ten and a-half years preceding the Mutiny the estates were mortgaged to a Ferokebad banker, and have since, in a great measure, passed away from the family.

NOTE.—A brigade of British troops under Sir Ralph Abercrombie completely routed the Rohillas under Ghulam Muhammad and brought their dominion to an end; the loss on the British side being 600 men and 14 Officers (see entry No. 105). Najib Khan and Buland Khan, two Rohilla chiefs, were slain in the battle.

(3) On some rising ground south-east of the village of Fatehganj West or Bhaitaura, in tahsil Bareilly, stands a memorial to the British troops who fell in the engagement of 24th October 1794, between the British and the Rohillas. It is a large obelisk of red sandstone slabs, and stands in a small but shady walled enclosure, which is entered by a Roman archway.

This monument is erected by the friends and relatives of those honored and beloved ones whose names are here inscribed, who yielded up their lives unto death, through the violence of a lawless and fanatical insurrection at this station on the 31st day of May A.D. 1857.		Note.—At Chunar in the Mirzapur district exists a slab bearing the same inscription (see entry No. 284); even the arrangement of the lines is the same. Chunar tradition says that the stone was ordered for some place up country, but never sent there, the reason obviously being a crack which obliterates one or two letters on the left side. The slab now at Fatehgunj must have been sent instead, and sent in all probability from Chunar.

108	All Souls' Memorial Church, Cawnpore.	In Cantonments.	Cawnpore	Monument to the memory of Christian people killed during the Mutiny of 1857.			NOTE.—The Memorial Church was erected at a cost of about £18,000 on the site of General Wheeler's entrenchment, and serves as a monument to those who fell at or near Cawnpore during the disturbances of 1857-58. It is built in the Lombardo-Gothic style of architecture, and constructed of red brick faced with buff sandstone. Its roof are groined and covered externally with corrugated iron. The floor of the nave and transept is paved with marble and that of the chancel with Minton's tiles. The principal feature in the western facade is the rose-window over the entrance, while the windows at the eastern end, which is apsidal are enriched with stained glass memorials to the victims of the great rebellion. Other less striking records of bravery and death exist in the 14 memorial tablets which cover the walls.

144	...	...	Cawnpore,	Memorial cross, marking the scene of the massacre of the Cawnpore garrison in 1857.			At Chaura Sati Ghat, about a mile from the railway bridge, on the right bank of the Ganges, at Cawnpore is a stone cross inscribed " In memoriam , 27th July 1857." This is the Ghat at which the people after leaving Wheeler's Entrenchment were embarked by the Nana who opened fire on them as soon as they got out on the river. It would add to the historical interest of the place if the Ghat and the temple were maintained by Government.

(3) Close to the European Barracks No. 4, Cawnpore Cantonments, near General Wheeler's Entrenchment, stands a monument consisting of a large stone cross enclosed by an iron railing over the well, in which were buried in 1857 about 250 victims who lost their lives during the defence of the entrenchments.

(5) In a well under this cross were laid by ye hands of their fellows in suffering, ye bodies of men, women, and children, who died hard by during ye heroic defence of Wheeler's Entrenchment when beleaguered by ye rebel Nana, June 6th to 27th. A.D. MDCCCLVII.

Our bones are scattered at ye grave's mouth as when one cuttieth and cleaveth wood upon ye earth. But our eyes are unto Thee, O'God the Lord.

At the four corners of the iron railing are stone crosses inscribed as follows under :—

" In memory of Lieutenant Glanville, 2nd Battalion Fusiliers and Sergeant J. Magrath and 15 privates of No. 9 Company of the Madras Fusiliers who formed part of Sir H. Wheeler's Garrison and were killed during its investment by the Bengal Mutineers in June 1857.

This stone is erected by the Madras Fusiliers in remembrance of the above brave men."

" In memory of Captain Robert Urquhart Jenkins of the 2nd Light Cavalry, who died from wounds received shortly before the surrender of the Garrison of Cawnpore and was buried in this well with many others."

Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him.

" In memory of Captain Sir George Parker, Bart., 24th Regiment, Native Infantry, Cantonment Magistrate of this place. Died in Wheeler's Entrenchment, July 1357."

149	Kacheri Cemetery to the north of the Collector's Office, Cawnpore.	A little to the left of the entrance gate.	Ditto ...	Tomb of Sir John Horsford, K.C.B., died 1817.	In memory of Sir John Horsford, Knight Commander of H. M.'s Most Honourable Order of the Bath, a Major-General on the Staff and Colonel Commandant of Artillery on the H. C.'s, Bengal Establishment, who after a long career of meritorious service distinguished by the most perfect integrity and honour, departed this life on the 20th of April A.D. 1817, aged 66. An exemplary victim to that spirited ardour and high sense of duty, which led him but a few weeks before under great bodily suffering and in very severe weather to manifest his professional skill and fortitude at the siege and capture of Hathras.	...	NOTE.—The Kacheri graveyard is one of the oldest cemeteries in Cawnpore, and although it does not possess many tombs of much historical interest, judging from the epitaphs, it contains many very old graves with quaint inscriptions upon them. It is strange to observe that only the officers and well-to-do people seem to have been buried here, the men and poor people having been buried in the cemetery known as Hira Mankapurwa. Sir John Horsford served under Lord Cornwallis in the Karnatik and Mairat against Tipu Sultan; he also served during the whole of Lord Lake's campaigns, and under the Marquis of Hastings down to the siege and capture of the important fortress of Hathras. After a service of 45 years in various parts of India, spent in constant and unwearying devotion to his duty, this eminent officer, whose sound constitution, hardened by temperance, had long contended with an extraordinary complication of disease, ended a long life of useful services, on the 20th April 1817, ten days after his return from field-service at Hathras. For military science, extensive knowledge, systematic arrangement inward application, and spotless integrity; he stood unexcelled; his presence of mind and fortitude were great to the last: regular in the performance of his duties, military and domestic, till within less than 24 hours of his death.

Sir John Horsford served nearly 39 years with his regiment as an officer, and was much employed on field-service during the eight years he commanded the Artillery, and his attention to its interests was exemplified in improving the situation of the soldier, both European and Native. He was one of the officers of the East Indian Company's Service first selected for the honors of the Bath; and it may justly be added that the State in him lost a most upright servant; the Army one of its most distinguished officers; and the honorable Order of the Bath a member worthy of its distinction.

NOTE.—This cemetery is now closed; in the old portion of it, along the north wall, it contains many old tombs of military officers, amongst them that of Sir William Peel, R. N., K.C.B. This tomb is not in good order. The glass over the marble, on which the inscription is written, has fallen out, and the marble is cracked.

Sir William Peel, Captain of the "Shannon" Brigade, was a man who would have made his mark in any age and under any circumstances. To an energy that nothing could daunt, a power that seemed never to tire, he added a freshness of intellect, a fund of resource, which made him, in the expressive language of one of his officers, "the mainspring that worked the machinery." Starting from Calcutta on an expedition unprecedented in Indian warfare, he conquered every obstacle, he succeeded to the very utmost extent of the power to succeed. He showed eminently all the qualities of an organizer and a leader of men. Not one single speck of failure marred the brightness of his eminence. His remarkable success in a novel undertaking, on an untried field, was in itself a proof that had he survived, his great powers might have been usefully employed in larger and more difficult undertakings. There must have been something very much above the common in the man who, not exercising supreme command, was able to stereotype his name in the history of his native land. Yet William Peel accomplished this.

The memory of his great name and his great deeds still survives. In the Eden Gardens, at Calcutta, a statue in white marble recalls the form and fashion of Jim who was indeed the noblest Volunteer of this or any age, who was successful because he was really great, and who, dying early, left a reputation without spot, the best inheritance he could bequeath to his countrymen.

To the memory of Lieutenant-Colonel Stainforth, who lived universally beloved and died equally lamented on October 27th, 1781.

To the memory of William Peel. His name will ever be dear to the British inhabitants of India, to whose succour he came in the hour of need and for whom he risked and gave his life. He was one of England's most devoted sons, and with all the talent of a brave and skilful sailor, he combined the virtues of a humble and sincere Christian.

This stone is erected over his remains by his military friends in India and several of the inhabitants of Calcutta. Captain Sir William Peel, R. N., K.C.B. was born in Stanhope-street, Mayfair, on the 2nd November 1824, and died at Cawnpore on the 27th April 1859.

159	Fatehpur Cemetery.	...	Fatehpur	Tomb of Mr. Robert Tudor Tucker, Judge, killed on 9th June 1857.	R. T. Tucker fell at the post of duty 1857, looking unto Jesus.	...	NOTE.—Mr. R. T. Tucker, Judge of Fatehpur, was a devout Christian, earnestly and conscientiously treading the appointed path of official duty. His enthusiasm had been roused to a still higher pitch by the intensity of his religious convictions, which had been striking deeper and deeper root, in spite of all the discouragements and distractions of Eastern life. At the entrance to Fatehpur he had erected four stone pillars, on two of which were engraved the Ten Commandments in Urdu and Hindi, and on the others, in the same characters, scriptural texts containing the essence of the Christian Faith. When the storm of the great rebellion burst over Fatehpur on the 9th June 1857, and when the European community left the station by the light of burning bungalows, Mr. Tucker stood fast and could not be induced to quit his post, whatever might be the perils which environed him. Throughout the day he was most active in his endeavours to suppress crime and to restore order; single-handed he slew some rebels in the street, and fought desperately on the top of the kacheri, resolutely and fiercely he stood at bay, loading and firing, until he had shot down many of his assailants. It is said that he was not overcome at last until the insurgents had fired the kacheri. And so the quiet, Christian Judge, so meek and merciful in time of peace, rose in the hour of war to the noblest heights of heroic daring, and died for the Government that he had served.

(6) برای یادگارست که بتاریخ سوم ماه جون سنه ۱۷۷۰ ع کپتان جیمس کرافورد صاحب بسمه دست درویشا وفات یافت NOTE.—The tomb is a large masonry structure, some 8 feet high, with a sandstone slab let into the upper block, on which the Urdu inscription is cut. The stone slab is, however, inserted upside down, and the inscription is getting worn away by the weather. NOTE.—There are 20 graves without any inscriptions on them. Near the entrance gate, however, are lying four stone slabs, the inscriptions on which are given in column 6.

NOTE.—This inscription is on a stone-slab inserted in a masonry pillar in the middle of the cemetery. In it are a number of graves without epitaphs, apparently those of the men mentioned in the inscription.
The Pindaris were freebooters, whose ravages were allowed, through the supineness of the British Government, to be the scourge of Central India and the Deccan from about 1804 to 1814. These banditti, who had their homes in Central India under the protection of Sindhia and Holkar, inherited the customs and traditions of the early Marathas under Savaji. Mounted on hardy ponies they used to sweep through the land in large bands, harrying the defenceless husbandmen at the spear's point, and carrying back stores of booty to their distant camp. Their audacity was so great that they paid no regard to the armies of the native powers and were scarcely to be deterred by the presence of a British detachment.

Sacred to the memory of Captain Peade, Lieutenant Morris, Artillery; Lieutenant Gillespie, 1st Battalion, 18th Regiment; Assistant Surgeon Hooper, and other brave men, who fell in action with Mir Khan, Pindari, near Kunch, 22nd May 1804.

221	Old Civil Cemetery, Benares.	At Chankaghat, thana Sikraul, Sadr Tahsil.	Benares...	Monument to the memory of Mr. Cherry and his Staff, who were murdered by Wazir Ali during the insurrection at Benares, 1799.	This obelisk was erected in memory of George Frederick Cherry, Esq., Governor-General's Agent, Captain Conway, Robert Graham, Esq., Richard Evans, Esq., who were murdered by Wazir Ali, 14th January 1799.		Note.—The monument consists of a large obelisk mounted on steps and surrounded by a stone railing. Wazir Ali Khan, the deposed Nawab of Oudh, who was living at Benares under the surveillance of Mr. Cherry, conceived a plot to murder all the English residents at the station. Mr. Cherry had invited Wazir Ali to breakfast, who drew his poignard and stabbed Mr. Cherry to the heart; and his followers began a general massacre of the Europeans. Mr. Samuel Davis, a Civil Servant of repute, and a Sanskrit Scholar, afterwards Director of the East India Company, retreated to the roof of his house, where he so gallantly saved the lives of his wife and children by his defence of a narrow winding staircase, armed only with a hogspear. The Hon'ble Mountstuart Elphinstone and his friend Houston mounted on horseback and rode for their lives. NOTE.—Colonel Francis Wilford was a good classical and Sanskrit scholar, and his varied and extensive reading was successfully brought into use for the illustration of ancient Indian geography. But his judgment was not equal to his learning, and his wild speculations on 'Egypt' and on the 'Sacred Isles of the West,' in the 3rd and 9th Volumes of the 'Asiatic Researches,' soon dragged him down to a lower position than he is justly entitled to both by his abilities and his attainments. His 'Essay on the comparative geography of India,' which was left unfinished at his death and which was published in 1851, is entirely free from the speculations of his earlier works, and is a living monument of the better judgment of his latter days.
222	Ditto	Ditto	Do.	Tomb of Lieutenant-Colonel Francis Wilford, died 1822.	Sacred to the memory of Francis Wilford, Lieutenant-Colonel in the Engineer Service of the East India Company, aged 71 years, deceased on the 4th of September 1822. Encouraged by the liberality of the Government of British India, he fixed his residence at Benares in the year 1788; and whilst yet in the vigour of his days, devoted his life to retirement and study, eminently qualified by previous education, extensive erudition, a true intellect and indefatigable zeal. He made himself master of the classical language and literature of the Hindus, and applied his knowledge to the eradication of the dark periods of antiquity, with a success that perpetuates his own reputation and the honor of the British name in the East. In the social relations of life his merits were proportioned to his talents, and the abilities of the scholar were reflected by the virtues of the man.

NOTE.—A slab over the gate has the inscription given in column 6.

In 1781, the conduct of Raja Chait Singh of Benares towards Warren Hastings, the Governor-General, was such as to require early punishment. On the 15th August 1781, the day after his arrival at Benares, Hastings sent the Raja a formal statement of the charges against him, with a demand for a full and categorical reply. Chait Singh's answer appeared so offensive in style and unsatisfactory in substance, that Hastings ordered Mr. W. Markham, the Resident, to place him under arrest. Early on the morning of the 16th August, Chait Singh was made a prisoner at large in his own palace at Shivala Ghat, with a sepoy guard under Lieutenants Scott, Stalker, and Symes outside. He sent Hastings a submissive message; meanwhile his armed retainers from Ramnagar crossed the Ganges, and, aided by the mob of the city, fell upon the Sepoy guard who, having only unloaded muskets and empty pouches, were soon cut to pieces where they stood. Two more companies marching through the narrow streets were nearly destroyed; the whole number of killed and wounded amounting to about 205 men. Chait Singh himself dropped from the terrace by a rope of turbans into a boat, and was borne in safety to his castle-palace of Ramnagar.

NOTE.—Warren Hastings in his "Narrative" of the Benares insurrection writes:—"These officers were the first victims to the fury of the tumultuous assembly; but not until they had by astonishing efforts of bravery and undismayed amidst the imminent dangers which surrounded them, involved a much superior number of their enemies in their fate. In this general report of them, all accounts concur, though varying in circumstances. I yield to my own feelings in bestowing this just but unavailing tribute to these unhappy gentlemen."

The enclosed ground was the burial-place of brave men who died in the performance of their duty on the 16th August 1781, A.D. This wall has been built to protect the spot from desecration, A.D. 1862.

This tablet has been erected by the Government, North-Western Provinces, to preserve the last earthly resting-place of—Lieutenants A. Scott, 1st Battalion, Sepoys; Jeremiah Symes, 2nd Battalion, Sepoys; J. Stalker, Resident's Bodyguard; who were killed, 17th August 1781, near this spot doing their duty.

This monument to the memory of Lieutenants John Stalker, Archibald Scott, and Jeremiah Symes, who were massacred at Shivala on the 17th day of August 1781, though erected by the hand of friendship, shall offer no praise which themselves might blush to read, yet be it remembered that the determined courage they showed was not an act of desperation, but a part of their characters as British officers; that they fell not wholly useless to their country's cause in the sentiments of awe and respect they impressed on their enemies, in the tears of regret and emulation they drew from their fellow-soldiers: Erected over the remains of all bodies removed from the old City burial-ground to this spot, 10th January 1829, by James Prinsep.

248	Saint John's Church, Mirzapur.	Near the village of Tataba.	Mirzapur ...	Tablet to the memory of William Richard Moore, C. S., murdered by Jhuria Singh and his followers in 1857.	...	This tablet is erected to the memory of William Richard Moore, of the Bengal Civil Service, Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector of Mirzapur, whose mortal remains rest in the burial-ground of this station. He was the second son of Major J.A. Moore and Sophia Stewart, his wife, and was among the early victims of the fearful mutiny which desolated India in 1857, having been barbarously and treacherously murdered while in the energetic performance of his duty on the 4th July in that year. The remembrance of his high qualities as a public servant, of his excellence in all the relations of life, of his unsullied purity and honor as a man, and of his warm and unaffected piety as a Christian, furnishes to surviving relatives and friends consolation under a loss of which, alas ! it also tells the greatness. He was born on the 28th October 1832, and died on the 4th July 1857, in the 25th year of his age. He being made perfect in a short time, fulfilled a long time. Wisdom, chapter IV, verse 13.
249	Mirzapur Cemetery.	Opposite Post-office.	Do. ...	Tomb of William Richard Moore, C. S., murdered 1857.	Sacred to the memory of William Richard Moore, Bengal Civil Service, Joint Magistrate and Deputy Collector of Mirzapur, who was murdered on duty at the Pali Factory in that district during the rebellion in India on 4th July 1857, in the 25th year of his age. Blessed are they who die in the Lord.		NOTE.— See also entry No. 337. In July 1857, there were a number of townships on the left bank of the Ganges, which acknowledged as their chief Udwant Singh, a relative of Raja Chait Singh of Benares who had been dispossessed by Warren Hastings, and were in open rebellion. Udwant Singh, taking the title of Raja of Bhadohi, appointed agents to collect the revenue, enrolled a force, plundered those of his neighbours who refused to acknowledge him, and closed the Grand Trunk Road for the English. Against this man and his followers Mr. Moore, who had charge of the estates of the Raja of Benares, was making head as good as he could. It happened that by a fortunate chance one of his agents managed to secure the person of the rebel chief and one of his accomplices. These, caught red-handed in the act of rebellion, were tried by court-martial, condemned and hanged. This act of summary justice, far from intimidating the rebels, incited them to defiance. The widow of Udwant Singh offered a reward of Rs. 300 to the man who would bring her the head of Mr. Moore. It happened that on the 4th July, Mr. Moore arrived at the Indigo Factory of Pali, bringing with him some rebels whom he had captured. Here he was suddenly attacked by Jhuria Singh and his followers. Moore defended himself vigorously and, believing that a counter-attack would have its effect, sallied forth accompanied by the two managers of the factory, and some of his men, and charged the besiegers. These, however, were too numerous, and after a desperate fight, Moore and the two managers were captured. They were immediately put to death : Moore's head was severed from his body and carried to the widow of Udwant Singh, who paid for it the reward she had offered.

Sacred to the memory of James South Barwise, Esq., late of Faridabad in the zillah of Jaunpur, obit December 15th, 1844, et as 54 years.		Note.—Mr. James South Barwise settled down as Indigo Planter at Faridabad in the Jaunpur district in 1827, and became soon possessed of considerable property in indigo factories and landed estates. Owing to the enmity incurred by a long course of successful litigation with Mahesh Narayan Singh, a zamindar of the Jaunpur district, for the possession of a large estate, the property of the ancestors of Mahesh Narayan, he was attacked in his house at Faridabad on the night of the 15th December 1844, and cruelly murdered by, it is generally supposed a band of dakkits employed by that person, who was arrested and tried for the crime, but, in absence of any direct evidence, acquitted. As the founder of a school at Faridabad in connection with the Church Mission Society, and many other acts of beneficence and kindness towards the natives, amongst whom he was deservedly popular, Mr. Barwise is justly entitled to be ranked among the benefactors of India.

367		Ghāzipur Cantonments.	Ghāzipur,	Monument to the memory of Lord Cornwallis, Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief in India, died 1805.	Sacred to the memory of Charles, Marquess Cornwallis, Knight of the Most Noble Order of the Garter, General in His Majesty's Army, Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief in India, &c., &c. His first administration, commencing in September 1786, and terminating in October 1793, was not less distinguished by the successful operations of war, and by the forbearance and moderation with which he dictated the terms of peace, than by the just and liberal principles which marked his internal Government. He regulated the remuneration of the servants of the State on a scale calculated to ensure the purity of their conduct. He laid the foundation of a system of revenue which, while it limited and defined the claims of Government, was intended to confirm hereditary rights to the proprietors, and to give security to the cultivators of the soil. He framed a system of Judicature which restrained within strict bounds the power of public functionaries, and extended to the population of India the effective protection of laws adapted to usages and promulgated in their own languages. Invited in December 1804 to resume the same important station, he did not hesitate, though in advanced age, to obey the call of his country. During the short term of his last administration he was occupied in forming a plan for the pacification of India which, having the sanction of his high authority, was carried into effect by his successor. He died near this spot,		NOTE.—The monument is a heavy structure with a domed roof supported by Doric columns. The floor is raised some 12 feet from the ground, and is of handsome grey marble. In the centre stands a cenotaph of white marble, bearing on the south side a medallion bust of Lord Cornwallis between the figures of a Bráhma and a Mussalman, and on the north side the figures of a European and native soldier in attitudes of sorrow. The cenotaph is from the chisel of Flaxman. There is a statue of Cornwallis by Bacon, junior, in the Town Hall at Calcutta, and an excellent full length portrait hangs on the walls of the Council Chamber at Government House in the same city.

where his remains are deposited, on the 5th day of October 1805, in the 67th year of his age.

This monument, erected by the British inhabitants of Calcutta, attests their sense of those virtues which will live in the remembrance of grateful millions long after it shall have mouldered in the dust

Beneath this column are deposited the mortal remains of Madeline Elizabeth Maria Frances Wharton, eldest daughter of the late J. J. LeMarchand, Esq., of Muddiford House, Christ's Church, in the county of Hants wife of Thos. Ramsay Wharton, Esq., late of the 8th or K. R. I. Hussars, who departed this life on the 2nd December A. D. 1827, aged 36 years.

Sacred to the memory of Cornwallis LaTouche, Esq., Bengal Civil Service, who died 17th April 1837, aged 29 years.

The tribute of attached friends.

To the memory of William Frith, Esq., Companion of the Most Honorable Military Order of the Bath, Lieutenant-Colonel, H. M. 38th Regiment, born July 1780, died 27th May 1831.

(3) The same enclosure contains a tomb of Thomas Newal, Royal Artillery, died 1858.

(5) To the memory of Thomas Newal, Royal Artillery, died April 21st, 1858, aged 23 years.

NOTE.—Mr. Venables, an indigo planter, had by his unflinching during saved the district of Azamgarh in June 1857, when its natural guardians had withdrawn from it. Subsequently he had struggled bravely against the invaders from Oudh, and had ridden with Brigadier-General Franks as a volunteer in his glorious march from the eastern frontier of Oudh to Lucknow. Withdrawing thence to Allahabad, "broken in health and spirits, anxious for rest, looking forward eagerly to his return to England," he was persuaded by Lord Canning to return to Azamgarh, once again seriously threatened. It was in the performance of the great services he then rendered to the gallant Lord Mark Kerr and to Sir E. Lugard, inspired by the highest sense of duty that, on the 15th April, he was struck down. The wound was mortal. A few days afterwards death, resulting from the wound, cut short the sufferings and belied the hopes of this brave, self-denying gentleman, one among many such who in those days of sharp trial proved their right to be held in equal honor with the best rewarded officers of the East India Company and the Crown.

Sacred to the memory of Edward Frederick Venables, Esq., of Deoriaghat near Azamgarh, who, though not in the service of Government, upheld its authority in this district during a time of trial and difficulty, with equal valour, ability and prudence, and after attaining the highest personal distinction, fell in the gallant discharge of his duty, leaving a name dear both to his own countrymen and to the loyal portion of the native community, by whose joint subscriptions this monument is erected.

409	On the top of Sitoli hill near Almora.		Almora	Monument to the memory of Lieutenants Kink and Tapley, killed in the Gurkha War of 1815.		Sacred to the memory of Lieutenants Kink and Tapley, of the 2nd Battalion, 27th Regiment, Native Infantry. The latter was killed on the evening of the 26th April 1815 on duty at an advanced post in the town of Almora. The former died on the 16th of May following, a victim to zealous and continued exertion in the final operations of the campaign.	NOTE.—In 1815, Lord Hastings, the Governor-General of India, determined to carry the Gurkha War into the Nepalese province of Kumaun, which was untouched by the former hostilities and was almost unoccupied by the enemy. Being short of troops, he raised levies among the Rohillas and selected two officers to command them, Colonel W. L. Gardner (see entry No. 94) and Major Hyder Young Harshey, who, previous to 1802, had served in the Maratha forces. These irregular bodies of troops advanced almost simultaneously in February 1815. Colonel Gardner, aware that the Rohillas could not resist the Gurkhas in open fight, pushed up the Kosi river, and evading a serious engagement, marched round the enemy's flank. After a series of brilliant manoeuvres on their communications, he forced them (28th March) to retire to Almora, the capital of the province, where he followed them, and prepared for future operations. Hearsy proceeded up the river Kali, and at first met with no resistance; but on marching towards his colleague, he found the way blocked by a hill fort, before which he had to spend the month of March in trying to reduce it. Lord Hastings, on the 23rd March, ordered up a force of 2,500 men with 10 guns, under Colonel Nicholls, to the support of Gardner's irregulars. The junction between these two bodies was effected early in April, and it was not a day too soon, for Hearsy got into difficulties that might have brought ruin on the whole expedition. The Gurkha Government had despatched a body of troops across the Kali to ward off the danger that threatened them. This force defeated Hearsy, and not only took him prisoner, but recovered all his posts, and overrun the country he had conquered. Flushed with their success, the Gurkhas marched to Almora, and reached that town a day or two after Nicholls had joined Gardner. They now endeavoured to manoeuvre against the British, but on the 23rd April they were defeated and their commander killed, and two days later an outbreak of the town was assaulted and carried. The enemy, though much pressed in consequence of this misfortune, defended themselves gallantly to the last, and made a spirited night attack; but after a very severe fight they were again repulsed with loss: the next day guns were brought to bear at close range upon the town itself. Finding all further resistance useless, the Gurkha Commander proposed to treat, and a convention was agreed to, 27th April 1815, by which the whole province of Kumaun with all its strongholds was surrendered.

Here lies Henry Lawrence, who tried to do his duty. May the Lord have mercy on his soul. Born 28th June 1806, died 4th July 1857.

NOTE.—The inscription tablet was despoiled in the Mutiny.

NOTE.—In one of the upper rooms of the Residency building there is a small stone tablet bearing the following inscription:—
"In this room Sir H. Lawrence was wounded by a piece of shell on the 2nd July 1857."
And in a room in Dr. Fayer's house in the Residency enclosure there is another small tablet with the following inscription—
"Here Sir H. Lawrence died, 4th July 1857."

Sir Henry Lawrence was one of those rare characters which it is difficult to overpraise. The adjective "noble" expresses most nearly what he was. His thoughts and his deeds were alike noble. The nobleness of his nature, the honesty of his mind, his unqualified love of justice, displayed themselves in his every act. He was just to others because he was true to himself. Than his, it is difficult to imagine a purer, a more unselfish, a more blameless, and at the same time a more useful life. Great as were his services to his country, those he rendered to mankind were still greater. The establishment of the Lawrence Military Asylum

Lucknow,				at Sonawar, an institution which provides, in the healthy mountainous ranges of the Himalayas, food, lodging and instruction for the children of our European soldiers, was not the least important of those services. To it Sir Henry gave his time, his savings, the energies he could spare from his duties. The credit of the successful defence of the Lucknow Residency is due in the first place to Sir Henry Lawrence. He alone made it possible to successfully defend it. In a word, he devoted all his energies without reserve to the country he served so well. That Sir Henry felt to the last the inner conviction that he had so given himself wholly and without stint, is evidenced by the expression of his dying wish that, if any epitaph were placed on his tomb it should be simply this: "Here lies Henry Lawrence, who tried to do his duty." See entry No. 521.

This monument is erected over the remains of the late Brigadier-General Neill by the surviving officers of the regiment, as a mark of esteem for their late comrades, and in remembrance of their noble example and glorious deeds.		NOTE.—Near the Government Telegraph Office there is an old Nawabi Gateway which has been preserved, and is known as Neill's Gate. About 60 yards north of this gate stands a pillar bearing the following inscription:—"Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori." This tablet marks the spot where, towards the evening of the 25th September 1857 A. D., General Neill fell mortally wounded by a shot fired from the top of the adjacent gateway." Neill was a very remarkable man. He stands in the very front rank of those to whom the Indian Mutiny gave an opportunity of distinction. Not only did he succeed in everything he undertook, but he succeeded when the cases were all but desperate. He succeeded because he dared; because he threw into all he attempted the energy of one of the most determined characters ever bestowed on man. Such a man could not fail and live. His whole soul was in his profession. He made his regiment, the Madras Fusiliers, equal to any regiment in the world. He was a born warrior, very cool, very keen-sighted and very determined.

This monument is erected by the officers of Her Majesty's 90th Light Infantry in memory of their comrades who fell during the Indian Rebellion of 1857 and 1858, and as a tribute to their gallantry:—Colonel Robert P. In Christ. Revd. Hyacinth Kirwan, Chaplain of the 2nd Division of the Besieging Army, who died at Lucknow, 3rd April 1858. This stone is erected by his friend, Revd. H. Smith, D.D., Chaplain of the Field Hospital.

Pray for the soul of the Revd. Patrick Fairhurst, who, to assist his Catholic Brethren amid the perils of the great Indian Rebellion, left his home and fell a martyr to charity, a victim to hardship and privations on the 16th of June A. D. 1858. The Catholic soldiers of Her Majesty's 53rd Regiment here testify their admiration and gratitude.

NORE.—To command a small party defending a weak entrenchment against an overwhelming force, certain sterling qualities are necessary. A man need not be a strategist, or a tactician. But whilst confident in bearing, unyielding in temper, he must be bold, determined and resolute in action. He must likewise possess the valuable quality, the existence of which displays itself in the capacity to weigh correctly the professional opinions of the officers about him. By the testimony of all, Brigadier Inglis fulfilled all these conditions. His daring obstinacy in resisting, his confident mien, his cool courage, gained him the respect and affection of officers and men. For the defence of a weak post with a small force few men were better qualified than Brigadier Inglis, and certainly no one more merited than he the honours and promotion by the bestowal of which a grateful country showed its sense of the eminent service he had rendered.

On the north face.—Sacred to the memory of Major-General Sir John Inglis, K.C.B., Colonel, Her Majesty's 32nd Regiment, who with a bandful of devoted men defended the Residency of Lucknow for 87 days, from 3rd July 1857 to 27th September, against an overwhelming force of the enemy.

On the west face.—Born November 15th, 1814, died at Homberg, Germany, September 27th, 1862.

On the south face.—This memorial is erected by his surviving comrades and friends, A. D. 1894.

Susanna Palmer, killed in this room by a cannon ball on the 1st July 1857, in her nineteenth year.

The Right Hon'ble the Earl of Canning, G.C.B., G. C.S.I., Viceroy and Governor-General of India, expressed his admiration of the defence of the Residency of Lucknow in the following words:—

"There does not stand recorded in the annals of war an achievement more truly heroic than the defence of the Residency at Lucknow."

On 30th June 1857 A.D., the day after the battle of Chinhut, the siege began. On the 2nd July, Sir Henry Lawrence was mortally wounded by a shell which burst within the Residency building. The command then devolved on Brigadier J. E. W. Inglis, Her Majesty's 32nd Regiment. The force within the defences then consisted of 130 officers, British and Native, 740 British and 700 native troops, and 150 Civilian Volunteers. There were 237 women, 260 children, 50 boys of La Martiniere College, 27 non-combatant Europeans, and 700 non-combatant Natives, being a total of 2,994 souls.

477	...	In the vault of La Martiniere College building, Lucknow.	Lucknow ...	Tomb of Major-General Claude Martin, died 1800.	Here lies Claude Martin, born at Lyons, the 5th day of January 1735. Arrived in India as a common soldier and died at Lucknow, the 13th September 1800, a Major-General. Pray for his soul.		NOTE.—Claude Martin was the son of a silk manufacturer at Lyons, and at an early age enlisted in the French army. For his good conduct he was removed from the infantry to the cavalry and appointed a trooper in Count de Lally's bodyguard, a small corps of select men formed for the purpose of accompanying that officer to Pondicherry, of which place he had then been appointed Governor. Soon after Lally's arrival at Pondicherry, he exercised his power with such oppressive severity and enforced the discipline of the army with such rigid minuteness, that his conduct excited dissatisfaction throughout the settlement. Several remonstrances on his conduct were transmitted to France, and many officers of distinction resigned the service. He, nevertheless, persevered in his injudicious system of discipline and the troops became so disaffected and driven to despair by the misery and famine which desolated Pondicherry in 1760, that when the English army laid siege to it, great numbers deserted from the garrison, and at last Lally's own bodyguard went over in a body to the English, carrying their horses, arms, &c., along with them. This corps was well received, and Martin was soon noticed for his spirit and ability which he displayed on many occasions. On the return of the British army to Madras, after the surrender of Pondicherry, Martin obtained permission to raise a company of Chasseurs from among the French prisoners, of which he got the command, with the rank of Ensign in the Company's service. A few weeks after he received this appointment, he was ordered to proceed with his Chasseurs to Bengal. On their passage the ship in which they were embarked sprung a leak, and Martin, by great fortitude and perseverance, but with much difficulty, saved himself and some of his men in one of the ship's boats. On his arrival in Calcutta he was appointed a Cornet of Cavalry, in which service he continued until he had risen by regular succession to the rank of Captain in the line, when he obtained a company of infantry. Shortly after this promotion he was—being an able draftsman,—employed to survey the north-eastern districts of Bengal, and on completing that task he was sent to Oudh, in order to assist in surveying that province. While employed in this service he resided chiefly at Lucknow, where he amused himself in showing his ingenuity in several branches of mechanics and his skill in gunnery, which gave the Nawáb, Asaf-ud-daulah, so high a notion of the value of his services, that he solicited and obtained permission from the Governor and Council of Calcutta to appoint him Superintendent of his artillery park and arsenal. Captain Martin was so well satisfied with this appointment and with his prospects in the service of the Nawab, that he proposed to the Governor and Council to relinquish his pay and allowances in the Company's service, on condition of his being permitted to retain his rank and to continue in the service of the Nawab Vazir. His proposal being acceded to, he was admitted into the confidence of the Vazir, and in the different changes which took place in the Councils of the Nawab as well as in the various negotiations with the English Government, Captain Martin was his secret adviser. He seldom, however, appeared at the Darbár, and he never held any ostensible situation in the administration of the Vazir's Government; but few measures of importance were adopted without his advice being previously taken. Hence his influence at the Court of Lucknow became very considerable, not only with the Vazir but with his ministers, and that influence enabled him to amass an immense fortune. After having lived 25 years at Lucknow, he had attained, by regular succession, the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel in the Company's service. At the commencement of the war with Tipu Sulán in 1790, Lieutenant-Colonel Martin presented the Company at his private expense with a number of fine horses sufficient to mount a troop of cavalry. He was soon afterwards promoted to the rank of Colonel in their service, and in 1796, when the Company's officers received brevet rank from His Majesty, Colonel Martin obtained that of Major-General. By his will, after providing for his dependents, and leaving large sums of money to be given away in charity, he founded schools at Lucknow, Calcutta, and Lyons. He left directions that his house "Constantin," at Lucknow, the present La Martinière, should never be sold, but serve as a mausoleum for his remains; and he committed it to the care of the ruling power in the country for the time being. The will concludes with a curious exposition of the principles by which he regulated his conduct through life. He avows that self-interest was his sole motive of action, and that the aim of which he had been guilty were very great and manifold; and he concludes by asking forgiveness of God, which he hopes his sincere confession of wickedness will avail to obtain.

Here lieth all that could die of William Stephen Raikes Hodson, Captain and Brevet-Major, 1st E. B. A little while, II Cor. IV, 12.		NOTE.—Hodson was a man of rare energy of character, daring, always courting danger, and reckless. He had been, some years before the Mutiny, one of that noble band of pioneers who, under Henry Lawrence, had cleared the way for the civilization of the Punjab, and he had afterwards risen to the command of that famous Guide Corps, the institution of which had been one of the most cherished and the most successful projects of his accomplished chief. But, amidst a career of the brightest promise, a heavy cloud had gathered over him and shortly before 1857 he had rejoined his old regiment, the 1st (Company's) Fusiliers, as a subaltern, chafing under a sense of wrong, and eager to clear himself from what he declared to be unmerited imputations upon his character. This gloom was upon him when, in May 1857, General Anson, discovering his many fine qualities, offered him a place in the department of the Quarter-master-General, and especially charged him with the intelligence branch of its duties, in prosecution of which he was to raise an entire new regiment of Irregular Horse. His fearlessness, his contempt of danger, his joy in the battle, his ever cool brain, made him invaluable to a commander. The only stain upon his character is the shooting of the three unresisting Delhi princes on the 21st September 1857, one of the most painful episodes connected with the Mutiny.

NOTE.—The life of Havelock had been a life devoted to his profession: he had made the strict performance of duty his polar star. Gifted with military abilities of a high order, and conscious that he possessed those abilities, he had borne without repining the sapping torment of slow promotion and its inevitable results—employment in positions below his capacity. But every trial of Fortune had found him cheerful, resolute and devoted. To the smallest office he gave his best abilities, and, whilst thus labouring he had wisdom also to prepare himself for the eventualities which were to follow. When the opportunity did come, he used it in a manner which electrified his contemporaries, which gained for him the confidence and devotion of his soldiers. The statue which adorns Trafalgar Square, London, while it will show his outward form to the generations which shall have known him not, will whet their curiosity to inquire regarding the early training and later deeds of one who, in a short and glorious campaign, illustrated all the qualities which combine to form a commander of the first rank.

Saved to the memory of Lieutenant Francis Dobbs, who was killed in action at the storm of the Shah Najaf on the 16th November 1857 and buried here; also of Privates Edward Donaghey, Hugh Gray, Alexander Comb, Patrick Collins, Thomas Kenny, who were killed in action on the same day and interred in the same grave.

Here rest the mortal remains of Henry Havelock, Major-General in the British Army, Knight Commander of the Bath, who died at Dilkusha, Lucknow, of dysentery produced by the hardships of a campaign, in which he achieved immortal fame, on the 24th November 1857. He was born on the 5th April 1795, at Bishops County, Durham, England. Entered the Army 1815, came to India 1823, and served there with little interruption till his death. He bore an honourable part in the wars of Burma, Afghanistan, the Maharatta Campaign of 1843, and the Sutlej of 1845-46. Retained by adverse circumstances during many years in a subordinate position, it was the aim of his life to prove that the profession of a Christian is consistent with the fullest discharge of the duties of a soldier. He commanded a Division in the Persian Expedition of 1857. In the terrible convulsion of that year his genius and character were at length fully developed and known to the world. Saved from shipwreck on the Ceylon coast by that Providence which designed him for yet greater things, he was nominated to the command of the column destined to relieve the brave garrison of Lucknow. This object, after almost superhuman exertions, he, by the blessing of God, accomplished. But he was not spared to receive on earth the reward so dearly earned. The Divine Master, whom he served, saw fit to remove him

482	Alam Bagh Cemetery.	In the Alam Bagh, about 5 miles out of Lucknow, on the Cawn pore road.	Lucknow...		from the sphere of his labours in the moment of his greatest triumph. He departed to his rest in humble but confident expectation of greater rewards than those which a grateful country was anxious to bestow. In him the skill of a commander, the courage and devotion of a soldier, the learning of a scholar, the grace of a high bred gentleman, and all the social and domestic virtues of a husband, father and friend, were blended together and strengthened, harmonized and adorned by the spirit of a true Christian: the result of the influence of the Holy Spirit on his heart and a humble reliance on the merits of a crucified Saviour. I have fought a good fight; I have finished my course; I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the Righteous Judge, shall give me that day, and not to me only, but to all those that love his appearance. His ashes in a peaceful urn shall rest, His name a great sample stands to show, How strangely high endeavours may be blessed, Where piety and valour jointly go. This monument is erected by his sorrowing widow and family. Sacred to the memory of Major J. Perrin, Lieutenants V. Grahame, J. J. Nunn and M. Preston, 90th Light Infantry, who were killed in action near this spot, 24th September 1857. Erected by their comrades.		8

530	...	...	Bahraich	Tomb of Mr. Ravenscroft, murdered 1823.			At the village of Bhabharpur near Bhinga in the Bahraich district, is the tomb of Mr. Ravenscroft, a monument with no stone tablet, which is kept up by the Rája of Bhinga. This officer was murdered on the 6th May 1823 by dakaits said to have been instigated by the Rája's son.
531	...	...	Gonda ...	Tomb of two English officers, said to have been killed 1858.			At the village Bithania, nine or ten miles north-east of Tulsipur in the Gonda district, is an old brick tomb stated to be the grave of two English officers who were killed in a fight with the rebels in 1858. Enquiries were made in the beginning of 1886 by Colonel Noble, the then Deputy Commissioner, as to the names of the officers, but without success. The tomb, which consists of only two small brick pillars on a low platform, is of no architectural interest, and is kept in repair by the Balrámpur estate.

The Sharqi Architecture of Jaunpur,

WITH

NOTES ON ZAFARABAD, SAHET MAHET AND OTHER PLACES IN THE N.-W. P. & OUDH.

By DR. A. FÜHRER, PH.D., AND EDMUND W. SMITH, ARCHITECT.

Edited by JAS. BURGESS, LL.D., C.L.E., Director-General of the Archaeological Survey of India.

Illustrated by 74 Plates of the Sharqi Architecture of Jaunpur, etc. Super-royal 4to. Sewed. Price Rs. 16.
“The finely illustrated volume issued under this title forms the first of a new series of reports begun after the reorganization of the Archaeological Surveys in Upper India in 1885; and if the work is to be continued on the same scale and with the same thoroughness of illustration, we may look to see at last something like an adequate illustration of a considerable portion at least of the immense and multifarious architectural remains of the Indian peninsula. . . . We recommend it to the attention of all students of architecture as a book worth possessing, containing some of the best illustrations of Indian architecture that have yet appeared. It is to be hoped that similar volumes, illustrating other branches of the architectural remains in India, will appear in due course.”—The Builder.

“This volume is an eminently business-like production, of practical value to the architect and archæologist—and possessed of many attractions from the historical and the artistic points of view, rendering the book instructive and interesting to the educated public in general. . . . It is the first volume of archæological reports on Upper India which is of any distinct use to the practical Englishman, whether architect, historian, or manufacturer.

“The Government may properly be urged and expected to continue this survey in the North-Western Provinces; and to utilize the architectural members of the Survey, moreover, in advising and controlling a reasonable conservation of Historical Monuments in the Indian Empire.”—Journal, R. Institute of British Architects, 19th June 1890.

“The first volume of Dr. Burgess’ new series is a scholarly and exhaustive monograph on a special and well-defined architectural period. It is published in the form of a handsome quarto. . . . supplying a valuable and interesting record of the history and architecture of Jaunpur, a city which for nearly a century vied with imperial Delhi both in power and splendour.

“Unlike the majority of the volumes in the former series, the Report is one of which the Government has no reason to be ashamed, and it may be safely recommended to any one interested either specially in Jaunpur or generally in Indian architecture as an adequate and trustworthy source of information.”—The Pioneer.

The Monumental Antiquities and Inscriptions in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

Described and arranged by DR. A. FÜHRER, PH.D., Archaeological Surveyor, N.-W. P. and Oudh.

“In this large volume Dr. Führer has given a very full account of the remains at each place with references to all sources of information, the whole being carefully classified with complete indices.”
Memoir on the Indian Surveys, 1875-1890.

“We have now in a handy form a series of lists of all notable antiquities of the Provinces arranged under the districts where they are found, and accompanied not only with references to all easily accessible sources of further information, but with a set of really workman-like indices.”—The Pioneer, September 25th, 1891.

The Moghul Architecture of Fatehpur-Sikri.

PART I.—By E. W. SMITH, Architectural Surveyor, N.-W. P. and Oudh.

Illustrated by 125 Plates, viz., 10 Photo-etchings, 10 Chromo-lithographs, and 105 detail drawings of great value to the Architect, Engineer, and Art Student.

ALLAHABAD.—Government Press, N.-W. P.

“At last an adequate beginning of a fairly complete and authoritative description of the magnificent buildings at and near Agra has been made. Nothing approaching to a scientific or reasonably satisfactory description of the Taj and other great edifices at Agra exists. The notices in Cunningham’s series of Archæological Reports are feeble, inane, and all but useless; and we fear that we must wait long for the costly and elaborate work which is needed to record the results of a thorough survey of the Fort, the Taj, the mausoleum at Sikandra, and the other architectural wonders which adorn Agra and its environs. Dr. Burgess, before his retirement, decided that since it was not possible to do everything, it was more advisable to begin with Fatehpur-Sikri than with Agra itself; and it was accordingly decreed that ‘the wonderful and beautiful city founded by Akbar at Fatehpur-Sikri, and often likened to Pompeii, should be surveyed.’

"In the course of four seasons Mr. Edmund W. Smith, the very capable officer in charge of the Architectural Branch of the Archaeological Survey, assisted by a well-trained staff of native draughtsmen, has made an elaborate survey of the Great Moghul's palace city. The first instalment of the results of his work lies before us in a handsome quarto volume, illustrated by one hundred and twenty-five full-page plates, of which some are drawings and others photo-etchings.

"The size of the work prevents its publication in one volume. The first part now published deals with the Mahál-i-Khas, including Akbar's bed-room, the Panch Mahál, the Diwan-i-Khas, and a few other buildings. The second part deals with Raja Bir Bal's house and the palace of Jodh Bai; the third will treat of Salim Chishti's shrine, the Turkish baths and many other edifices; and the fourth part will be devoted to the Great Mosque. Both the third and fourth parts will be enriched with coloured illustrations of the mural decoration and inlaid work. The volume now issued contains ten coloured plates, reproducing fresco paintings and ornaments, which have been executed by Messrs. Griggs and Son with their usual skill. These frescoes attract little attention from the ordinary visitor, and are now so damaged as scarcely to repay the cost and trouble of reproduction. One of the best executed and most intelligible fragments is that on the north wall of Akbar's bed-room, which represent some passengers of distinction taking their pleasure in a sailing boat, apparently on the Jumna. The figures are well drawn in the style affected by the miniature printers. In all the drawings the perspective is very bad. Some of the printings exhibit distinct and unmistakable traces of Chinese influence. Others seem to be imitations of Japanese motives, and several offer clear evidence of the influence exercised on Akbar's eclectic taste by Christian religious art.

"The best known of the frescoes, that on the western façade of Miriam's House, which the guide points out as a picture of the Annunciation, may possibly be intended to represent that event. But the guide's theory that Miriam, or Mary, was a Christian wife of Akbar, is unsupported by any evidence, and is opposed to the evidence that exists. The queen of Akbar who enjoyed the title of Maryam-us-Zamani, or 'the Mary of the age,' was really the daughter of a Hindu Raja. Akbar's mother was known by a similar title, Maryam Makani, and there is no more reason for believing Akbar's queen, who bore the court title of Maryam-us-Zamani, to have been a Christian, than there is for believing in the Christianity of his mother. In short, Akbar's Christian queen seems to be the creature of the imagination of guides greedy for buck-sheesh. But errors fed by buck-sheesh die hard, and Akbar's Christian queen is bound to reappear frequently for the next hundred years. The Roman Catholic priests insist on believing in her existence, and their congregations, of course, are of the same opinion.

"The celebrated throne-pillar in the Diwan-i-Khas is perhaps the most curious of the many marvels at Fatehpur. It is adequately illustrated by a dozen well-selected plates. We are by no means disposed to accept Mr. Keene's suggestion that the little building occupied by the throne-pillar is the Ibadat Khana, or hall, in which Akbar used to amuse himself with listening to set debates by the professors of rival creeds. The building is far too small for such a purpose, and does not agree well with the recorded description of the Ibadat Khana. It is more probable, as Mr. Smith observes, that the hall lay just outside the private buildings of the palace, than inside their precincts, and ruins of an important building exist near the Record Office in a position which would have been very suitable for a hall such as is described by the contemporary historian.

"We must not linger longer over the beauties of Akbar's magnificent, though singularly uncomfortable, palace. We can recommend Mr. Smith's book as an excellent piece of work, thoroughly well done; and can assure our readers that merely as a picture book it is good value for twenty rupees. The printing and paper are first rate. The binding, alas, is of the worst possible quality, and not even fit for a report by a Board of Revenue. When the next part comes out the local Government should follow the example of Bombay and treat its pretty pictures to safe and decent covering."—The Pioneer, July 12th, 1895.

NOTE.—Fathers Manuel Garcia and Manuel Danhaya were made war-prisoners at the capture of Hughli in 1631 by the Moghals and sent to Agra, where they died in prison in consequence of their fatigues and sufferings.

The two tombstones are at present in the Mortuary Chapel called by the Native Christians Padri Santos, evidently a corruption of the Portuguese Padre Santo. Its floor is made of tombstones bearing in Portuguese the names and dates of the deaths of the following 22 Catholic priests :—

Some of the tombstones in this chapel bear epitaphs in Armenian and record the deaths of the following priests:—
 Episcopus Zachar from Tabrez ... 1615
 Presbyter Juhannas ... 1682
 " Patros ... 1683
 " Pagdasur ... 1684
 " Arratun ... 1776
 See also Note to entry No. 74.

NOTE.—The epitaph of Khoja or Khwaja Mortenepus is in Persian, a literal translation of which is given in column 6.

The tombstone is in the Mortuary Chapel. The date of the epitaph, the high opinion of holiness in which Mortenepus was held, his wealth and the conspicuous place occupied by his tomb, seem to show that the chapel was originally erected as a funeral monument to his memory.

About 60 paces from the north wall of the enclosure of the tomb of Mir Abdulla, a poet of Jalangir's reign, are lying on a low mound in the fields seven Christian tombstones, with Portuguese epitaphs, two of which are dated Anno Domini 1736 and 1758, respectively. The former records the death of the wife of one Mirza Gulzar.

NOTE.—Lieutenant Joseph Taylor arrived in India in 1808, and was posted to Agra as Assistant to Captain Steele, the Garrison Engineer, to whose appointment he eventually succeeded, retaining it till 1826, between which period and 1830, when he returned to Agra as Superintending Engineer of the N.-W. provinces, he successively filled the appointments of Executive Engineer at Dinapore, Garrison Engineer and Civil Architect of Fort William, and for a short period that of Acting Chief Engineer.

In the early part of his service at Agra Lieutenant Taylor was frequently employed in the reduction of the numerous small forts in the vicinity of this station, at that time occupied by refractory zamindars, whom the recollection of successful resistance to the attempted collections of former native governors and ignorance of our power occasionally led to vain opposition to the British revenue authorities or an endeavour to protect the hordes of freebooters with which the Agra district was then infested. The cool and determined courage of Lieutenant Taylor was manifest in all these affairs, and opportunity was not wanting for its conspicuous display on more than one occasion.

In the year 1810, Lieutenant Taylor was selected by the Government to repair the Taj, and when the limited sum granted for repairs, as compared with the extent of work executed is considered, the praise bestowed by his superiors, on completion of his duty,

Here lies the holy Khoja Mortenepus, Armenian, who was a professed disciple of Christ, and who was a righteous man; whatever he had, he gave in charity to the poor, in token of fidelity to his Divine Master, in the year one thousand six hundred and eleven from the birth of Christ.

555	Cantonment Cemetery, Agra.	Near Civil Courts.	Agra	Tomb of Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Taylor, B. E., died 1835.			must meet with general assent. The repair of Akbar's Mausoleum at Sikandra was another of his duties, and although many years have elapsed since the task was completed, the structure bears full evidence of his zealous exertions. Many other public works of beauty and utility might be instanced at Agra, as well as at Calcutta, in proof of his taste and ability in this branch of his profession. But it was not in the execution of his civil duties alone that this gallant officer merits our notice. He was found a volunteer at Mithras in 1817, and was present during the siege and reduction of that fortress, the last and strongest of the forts of this class that had occasionally defied our power since the province of Agra and the Deccan had become subject to the British rule. He was promoted to the rank of Captain on the 1st September 1818, and in this rank was among the most distinguished of the officers of his corps. At the siege and capture of the fortified town of Bharatpur in 1825-26, having been severely wounded in an attempt to blow up a gallery made by the enemy into the ditch, which greatly impeded the operations of the attacking force, he received the personal and written thanks of the Commander-in-Chief for his gallantry. His services at Bharatpur were further acknowledged by his promotion to a Brevet Majority from the date of the fall of that fortress. His promotion to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel took place on the 18th June 1831, and he died at the early age of 45 at Agra, on the morning of the 20th April 1835, from an apoplectic attack, leaving behind him a general feeling of respect for his memory and of sympathy with those by whom his loss was severely felt.
556	R. Catholic Cathedral, Agra.	In Padritolah	Ditto	Tablet in memory of Father Francis, O. C., killed at Moodki, 1845.		Sacred to the memory of the Rev. Father Francis of St. Etienne, Apostolic Missionary of the Capuchin Order, who during the performance of his sacred duties towards the Catholic soldiers of the British Army, fell a victim by the sword of the enemy in the field of Mood-ki, on the 18th December 1845, aged 34 years.

A martyr of charity whom no danger could deter from attending to his flock ; a vigilant, a faithful shepherd. He attended the Kabul troops at Ferozepore, was present with them at Maharajpore, administering to their spiritual wants when cholera was afflicting Agra in 1843, and raging in Meerut in 1845. He was seen day and night in the hospitals, venerated and beloved by Catholics, esteemed and admired by those of a different creed. Friend to all, and enemy to none, zealous for the honour and glory of God, unaffected in his piety and devotion, compassionate to the widow, orphan and poor. He sealed his glorious course with his blood for the sake of those whom Christ had redeemed.

NOTE.—Major Campbell was the third son of William Campbell, Esquire, of Fairfield, North Britain. He entered the Bengal Artillery in 1805, and early rose to distinction for his zeal as an officer. He served with the army under Lord Lake, and on subsequent occasions, on actual service ; was early brought on the staff, first as Adjutant and Quartermaster of his corps in 1810, and since that time he has filled many situations on the General Staff of the Army until 1819, when he was appointed Deputy Secretary to Government in the Military Department ; and in 1821 he was nominated Agent for the supply of Gun Carriages at the Bengal Presidency, first at Cossimbore, and afterwards at Fatchgarh, which he held until his death.

As an officer, Major Campbell's professional attainments placed him in the highest rank of a corps pre-eminent for science and ability ; and the kindness and generosity of his disposition endeared him to all who had the happiness to partake of his friendship. Devoted to the public services and to the interests of his profession, he was ever actively employed in what could benefit the first or promote the last. His papers in the British Indian Military Repository, particularly those containing the History of Sieges in Bengal, are models of good writing on professional subjects and display a genius and talent which shone conspicuously in whatever he attempted.
